A Hilarious Fall: The Christmas Morning Mishap

Logan Andrews

"What is going on?' I hollered! I was dizzy from the fumes of adhesive and construction in the city. Christmas was near and the season was changing. I quicky hopped out of bed to loud banging and I ran to the stairs leading down off of the second floor I was almost at the second step down towards the landing when I slipped and began to fall. "Ouch!" and "Darn!" I stubbed my middle toe. I twisted my ankle and i fell down more than halfway down fifteen steps! I hit my head and I broke my fall with my arm. "Ouch, that really hurt!" I thought to myself. I had to regain my head and balance the impacts were electric and shocking. I was so interested in seeing the construction and what was causing the noise I fell down and I was injured. It was really funny I was wearing bed trousers and a bathrobe to cover up from the cold weather I left on a hamper next to my bed also carpet slippers. I wanted to cry although I was still in One piece. I went to the neighboors house to ask if they had heard what had happened and they said "Yes!" they were concerned. I told them I had fell and It was loud and embarrasing they replied "I know I heard a loud noise and someone holler 'OUCH'!" I told them It was me and we Laughed together. I was more carefull after that!
